

A gentle nudge. A little balance.

1 solid rocker. No assembly.

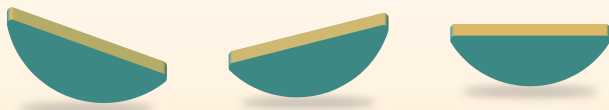

Colors show surfaces of one solid body.

Place on a firm, level desk, away from the edge. Set the curved underside down and the long flat top up.

Nudge. Release. Watch.

Gently press near one end of the top, then let go. Start with a small tilt, below 15 degrees.

Let the curve work.

One rocker, three positions.

The whole body rocks. Gravity draws it toward its level pose after a small tilt. Settling varies with desk level, friction and print quality.

Tipped over?

A large push can flip it onto its top or end. Pick it up, put the curved side down and try a smaller nudge.

Keep the contact surface clean.

If it catches or slides, remove debris and try a clean, firm, level surface. Wipe clean; stop using it if damaged or rough. Put it back in its box when finished.

Adult desk object. Physical performance has not been tested.
